

Dynasoft Communications grand opening Monday

The expansion of Dynasoft Communications Inc. into Swift Current Will be a home coming for Dynasoft's president.

Ian Bull, who has owned and operated his own computer and software business in Lloydminster for seven years, will be expanding and now operating the Swift Current branch as well.

Karen Stenstrom, office manager for the new location, explained Dynasoft will be open on Monday at their 143 Central Ave. N. location.

Bull, who left Swift Current to pursue his computer career, has earned a series of accolades during the past few years. He received the 2004 National Achievement Award by the Canadian Council of Technicians and Technologists, plus he has been honoured by the Alberta Society of Engineering Technologists.

Swift Current's Dynasoft office will offer just about everything computer related, ranging from systems, programming for different businesses, computer repair, sales, website design, custom software, custom database, mobile hardware, business hardware, web telecommunications, hosting websites, networking, and system analysis.

Carrie Schapansky will also work in the office as a project coordinator.

Bull will travel from Lloydminster to be in the office a few days a week.

*Press Release Date:
The Southwest Booster
March 5, 2005*